

NIGHTSCAPING

BY JOHN THEO

New Englanders love to express their individuality through their homes and gardens, but showing off your property does not have to end at dusk. Landscape lighting, or nightscaping, is a way to highlight areas of your home long after the sun goes down.

The landscape lighting technology has been around since the 1950s, but it was consigned mostly to low-profile walkways and driveway lights. Over the following decades the technology improved, costs came down and people became more creative with the lighting applications.